Private Stormwater Facility Contractors Available for Detention Facility Maintenance

Many developments within the City of Snohomish contain private stormwater detention facilities such as stormwater ponds or concrete vaults. These may be on private property or within the HOA's common property.

Property owners within each development containing these private stormwater facilities are responsible for ensuring that they are properly maintained and functioning as designed, according to SMC 15.16.

Proper maintenance and functionality require regular inspections and maintenance. Appropriate maintenance activities may include invasive species management, sediment removal, fence repair, etc. For a thorough list of maintenance standards, see the 2019 Stormwater Management Manual for Western Washington's BMP Maintenance Tables.

Some maintenance may require the use of a contractor that can provide special equipment or expertise. When hiring a contractor, it is recommended to obtain at least three competitive bids, making sure to provide each contractor with the same information and list of requested services.

The City of Snohomish has compiled a list of local contractors that perform these maintenance services. The City of Snohomish does not endorse any of the contractors below, nor does it guarantee the level of service to be provided. The information listed below is kept as accurate and complete as possible; however, all vendor information should be independently verified.
